Methodology

Anomalies in the seat distribution of the Seats

This section serves to explain the essential circumstances of the election:

According to § 9 of the election regulations of the student body of the Hamburg University of Applied Sciences (HAW Hamburg), the number of seats per list is determined by the Sainte-Laguë procedure.

In the StuPa election 2024/25, there were 21 seats that had to be distributed among the various university-wide lists. When applying the Sainte-Laguë method, we were guided by the German Bundestag's definition of parliament.

With a total of 762 valid votes and 11 abstentions, an approximate allocation was initially calculated:

Overall votes / Seat Number of = approximate allocation $762 / 21 = 36.28571429$

To determine the number of seats for each list, the overall number of votes for each list (e.g. List 1 with 255 votes) was divided by the approximate allocation:

(list votes) / approximate allocation = approximation of the number of seats Example list 1: $255 / 36.28571429 = 7.027559055$

The resulting quotients were rounded to whole numbers: If there was a remainder of more or less than 0.5, they were rounded up or down; if there was a remainder of exactly 0.5, the decision was made by drawing lots. The divisor was adjusted so that the total number of seats matched the total number of seats to be allocated.

Anomaly 1

When using this procedure, the sum of the rounded seat numbers may be greater than the available Number of Seats.

In such a case, the most democratic way is followed: Lists are given a vote based on the remainders closest to their rounded-up or rounded-down numbers. Lists whose rounded-up numbers are furthest away from these remainders are accordingly not taken into account.

In our case, List 3 is closer to its rounded number compared to List 4:

List 3: $4 - 3.55511811 = 0.44488189$

List 4: $1 - 0.551181102 = 0.448818898$

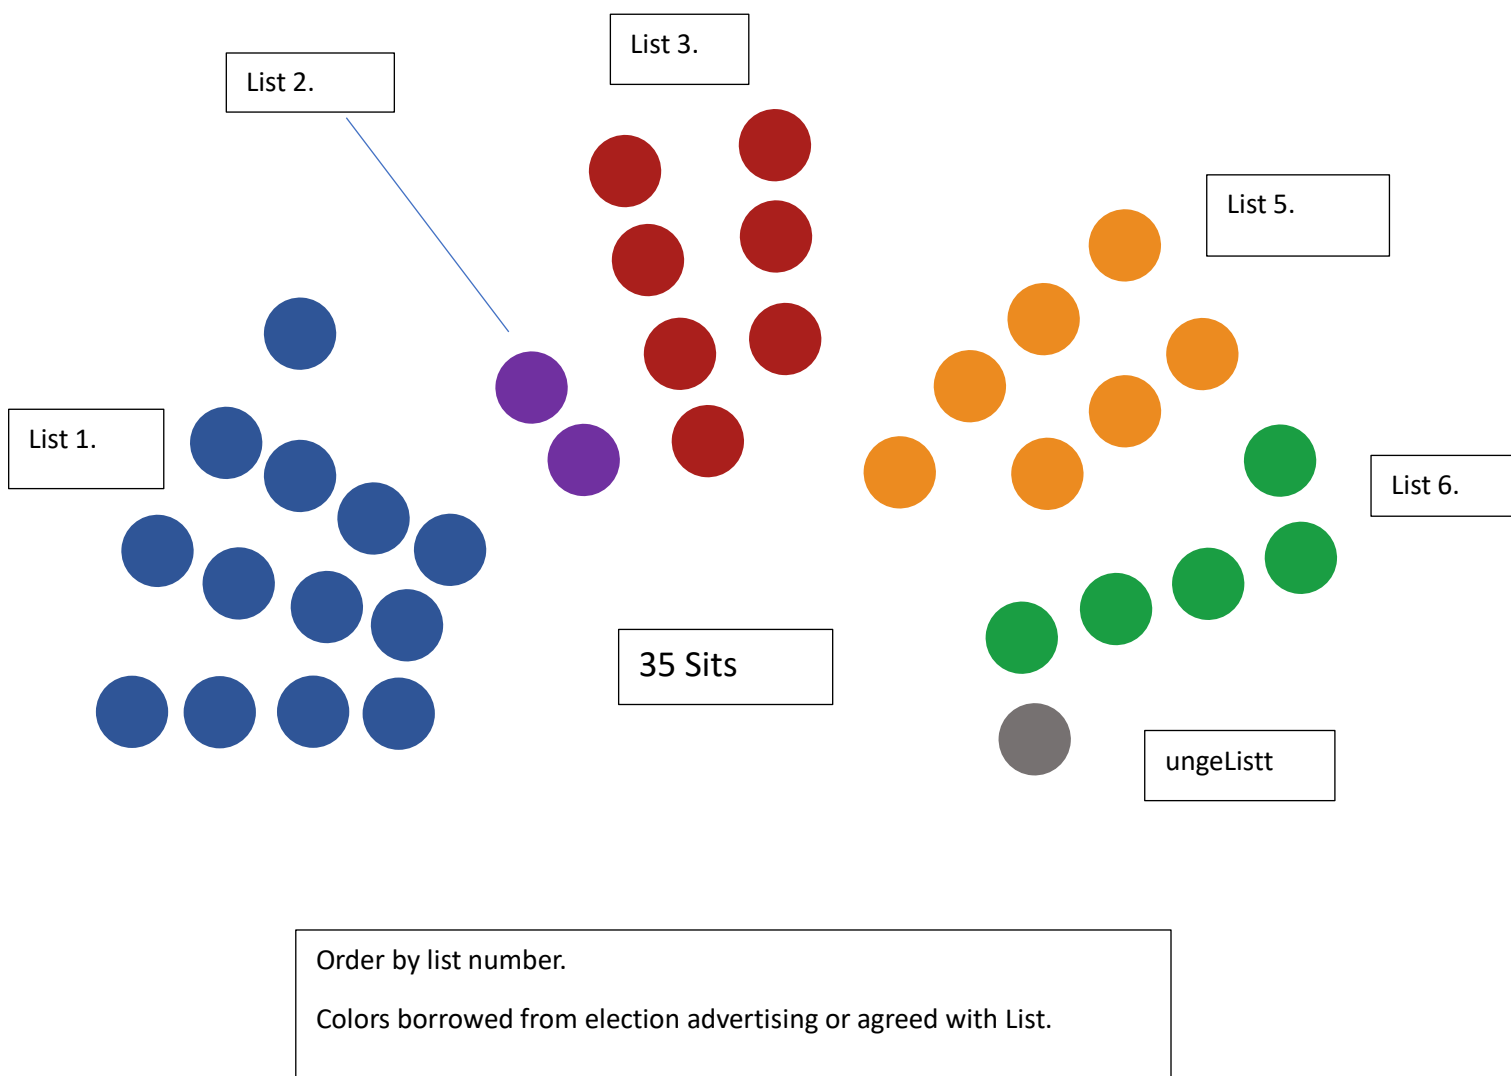

$0.448818898 - 0.44488189 = 0.003937008$

List 4 will therefore not receive a seat.

NOTE: The preliminary final result can be appealed in writing to the Arbitration Committee until 22.01.2024 (schlichtung@asta.haw-hamburg.de) in writing by 22 January 2024.
